THAT SWEATSHOP

Run by the Post Office Department at Washington.

THE EXPOSURE IS APPLAUDED

By the Public--The Poor Women Encouraged by the Efforts in Their Behalf--The Second Assistant Postmaster General's Hard Hearted Remark--His Explanation--Worse than the Offense.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Jan. 22--The Times says: The revelations printed yesterday concerning the wretched conditions of work and pay under which American women are struggling for bread in the government mail bag repair shop were read everywhere with keen interest in this community. There was none to commend the management there and its results except those who were indicted.

Everywhere there were commendations of the women who were "in the shop," and enough to make their protest to Gen. Nelson, Second Assistant Postmaster General.

The practical position of General Nelson, as published in the Evening Times: Yes that is all true, but what are you going to do about it? Was, to say the least, unexpected. There was some hope that he had declined to act in favor of the employees for the reason that he was not familiar with the facts. On the contrary, he knows it, he knew it, and justifies it. The excuse of the highest authority on the subject appears to be, that if the women could be made to work for less, it would be a better thing for the government. There is only one conclusion for General Nelson's remarks, viz.: that there will be another reduction in wages as soon as the women grow strong enough to do more work for less pay. Why not have it done by the Chinese?

The hint was plainly given yesterday that if nothing else would prevail there would be a congressional investigation. Public opinion has all along been crystallized in the conviction that the undenied allegations as to the excessive work, the small pay, and the unhealthy conditions at "the shop" are a shame and a disgrace to the government, and an outrage upon the employees. The temper of Gen. Nelson toward the employees might have been gathered from his advice to the women who protested, to go back and see Major Tyler about it. It was not anticipated as losing a place is the penalty of talking, that the subject would have a public exposition.

It is true that women are taken out of the shop in the afternoon utterly exhausted and the sons of their friends have to be taken home by their friends. It is true that they work at the hardest kind of labor for eight hours and a majority of them, perhaps, do not make more than fifty cents a day. It is true that while their wages were never high they have been reduced to the verge of a crime against the working woman, whether or not she has a dependent family, as many of them have. It is true that their wages have been cut mercilessly, there has been nothing done to make their surroundings agreeable. It is always the same dirt and dust, and disagreeable odors.

Skeletons in the Closet.

The superintendent, it would appear, could at least this season, when the appropriation was sufficient, have done something to alleviate the causes of complaint. There are strange tales in the air about that mail bag den, which it may be necessary to print. There have been many tears shed in that shop over wasted fingers and out of eyes dimmed all through the long day's work.

There are seven inspectors, one of whom gets $75 a month and three $60 a month. These salaries have not been touched, and perhaps they should not have been changed.

It has been suggested as a challenge to Gen. Nelson, that he permit the women to make their complaints in full, and give them immunity from discharge. In this will it alone be possible to get at the whole truth. It is stated that when the women are late at their work, by reason of delayed trains or otherwise, they are fined to the extent of a quarter of a day. A woman who makes fifty cents will be paid for that day only thirty-seven and a half cents.

Gen. Nelson says that he can get plenty of women to do the same work but it is the fact that applicants must be able to do an average day's work, as done by the experienced. Where then can he get recruits at these starvation wages? One of the girls wrote a letter to the Times last night in which she graphically described the joy in the shop over the championship of their cause by the Times. She says: "Don't be bluffed by Gen. Nelson or Major Tyler, now that you have started to meet us. It will be a worse shame and disgrace for the government, after what it knows, if will not send disinterested agents around here to look into the case."

Work for the Gallows.

Concerning the developments, the Times has the following editorial: It has been clearly demonstrated by the investigation of the department of mail bag repairs that Uncle Sam is proprietor of a sweat shop almost as objectionable and horrifying in its details as those of New York City. The character of the work is even more repulsive, as it embraces the mending of old socks impregnated with nauseating smells, and the pay of the employees is based on the sweat shop system of piece work, and is so low that they must either slave or starve.

Recently, the managers of this slave-driving den saw fit to cut the pay of women employees without interfering with the wages of the men. This injustice illustrates but one of the wrongs to which women must submit who are unfortunate enough to be compelled to work in that place, and as the postal authorities refuse to act on the appeals of these much abused employees, it is time Congress took steps to make an investigation of this lamentable condition of affairs.

The people of the United States do not want Uncle Sam to employ women at the low wages of from forty to sixty cents a day, especially at work that is as trying and laborious as mending rotten mail sacks. Nor do they desire to have to allow them to be subjected to the indignities of which some of these poor women complain, and should that information be telegraphed throughout the country, there would be a general demand for the discharge of the officials responsible for such outrages.

The miserable excuse of the authorities that "if the women do not care to work at the low wages paid, they do not need to, as there are plenty of others in the city who would be glad of the opportunity," is the same apology made by the New York sweat shop keepers. It is that of a heartless taskmaster, who rejoices in the sufferings of those under his supervision; and in this instance when a reduction of wages puts nothing into the pockets of the government sweat shop managers, it illustrates a species of inextinguishable cruelty. Let Congress use the government gallows on these offending managers. Their official heads should be made to pay the penalty of their misconduct.

WOMAN SUFFRAGISTS.

The National Association Convenes in Washington To-day.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Jan. 22--The twenty-eighth annual convention of the National American Woman Suffrage Association will begin to-morrow at the Church of Our Father. The convention will last through next Tuesday, with a religious service at the church next Sunday, which will be conducted by a woman minister. As a rule less time will be devoted to the reading of papers on general subjects connected with the suffrage movement than heretofore, and more time will be given to the actual business of the association. Miss Anthony, Mrs. Harriet Taylor Upton, Mrs. Carrie C. Chapman Catt, and a number of other women who have for years been actively identified with the suffrage movement are already here. They speak of the coming convention in the most enthusiastic manner, and, with women suffrage steadily gaining ground, especially in the western states, they consider the outlook for the future brighter and more encouraging than it has ever been since the question of giving women the right to vote was first raised in this country.

Mrs. Elizabeth Cady Stanton, the veteran honorary president of the association, will not be able to attend the sessions of the convention, but she has promised Miss Anthony that she would send a letter to be read to her fellow workers.

Carlisle's Opportunity.

BILBAO, Spain, Jan. 22--Rumors are current here of greatly increased activity in Carlisle circles, where it is hoped that the reverses which the Spanish forces have suffered in Cuba and the failure of General Campos to put down the insurrection may rouse the Spanish people against the government of the queen regent, and afford an opportunity for Don Carlos, or Don Jaime, his son.

The Flying Squadron.

LONDON, Jan. 22--The review of the flying squadron now off Spithead has again been postponed. The reason given is that the weather is too foggy for her majesty to be able to witness the review from Osborne house. But it is reported that the real cause of the postponement of the review is that news has been received of the death of Prince Henry of Battenberg, husband of the queen's youngest daughter.

MUNYON GOING TO EUROPE.

He Leaves in a Few Days to Open Branch Stores in London, Paris and Berlin.

The marvelous growth and great success of the Munyon Houseopathic Remedy Company is an object lesson well worth studying. This company has been in existence only four years. They launched into a business which seemed already overcrowded, where the sharpest competition had to be met, yet we are told that this company earned last year over a quarter of a million dollars, and that the remedies are used in every civilized country. This shows what can be accomplished by ceaseless energy and liberal advertising, can accomplish. Mr. Munyon says he attributes his success to two reasons. First, making sure that his remedies were just what he claimed for them; second, telling the people the truth about them by liberal newspaper advertising.

"There have been times in the history of this country," said Mr. Munyon, "when prospects looked pretty black, but I summoned the great army of newspapers to my aid. I told the people about my remedies. I asked them to believe me. I kept overhauling, telling the truth, and to-day these remedies can be found in every town in America, and the demand is so great from foreign countries that I leave in a few days to open branch establishments in London, Paris and Berlin."

ONE CONVENTION IDEA.

Mr. L. M. Wade Gives Some Reasons in Opposition to It.

To the Editor of the Intelligencer. SIR--I am opposed to the "one convention idea," suggested by Chairman Dawson.

First--Because the suggestion comes too late, and therefore might be construed to be in the interest of certain candidates for the nomination for state offices.

Second--Because it is apparent that the state ticket should not be nominated and the state platform promulgated until after the national convention is held.

Third--Because the coming together of the representative Republicans of the state in such conventions as the West Virginia Republicans will hold this year will be worth more than their cost to the party and the state.

Fourth--Because it is an important year for West Virginia Republicans and they should not try any experiments. Let good enough alone and make no departure from the old paths is my admonition to the state central committee, ere complications and dissatisfaction might arise and confront us in the preliminary work of the campaign. As it is, none is apprehended. However, I would not be averse to holding the state convention to select four delegates and four alternates at large to the St. Louis convention on the day following and at the same place as the meeting of the state league. Would it not be a good idea? I can see economy and saving of money to the delegates in holding said conventions at such time and place. In doing so it would be no material deviation from the old rule--thirty days earlier probably than they would otherwise be held. I see the necessity of selecting and organizing an executive committee early, but fail to see why it should be deferred until the nominating convention is held. Let it be done at the convention preceding it, and the committee put to work.

A Terrible Death.

YOUNGSTOWN, O., Jan. 22--The hoisting machinery in the converting department of the Ohio Steel company went wrong at 6:45 this morning and two cages went up and down at a terrible rate. Charles Harmanski was on one at the bottom and was brought to the top of the hoist with such force that his hips were both broken and his skull fractured and neck broken, expiring instantly. Pat Nagle and Andy Plasko were on the cage at the top and when they came down were thrown off. Both are somewhat hurt, but not fatally.

The Convention Postponed.

PITTSBURGH, Jan. 22--The convention of structural iron workers and bridge builders, which was to have been held here this week to form a national association, has been postponed. Telegrams received from L. Brady and J. W. Kelly, organizers of the bridge builders and housecarpenters, as they are known in New York, stated that the western unions had failed to elect representatives and that the convention would be held later.
